

About the Company

Lloyds Metals and Energy Limited (LMEL) is the largest iron ore miner in Maharashtra. Incorporated in 1977, it is engaged in mining iron ore, manufacturing coal-based Direct Reduced Iron (DRI) and generating power using waste heat recovery. Its DRI capacity of 340ktpa is the largest in Maharashtra, located in two districts: Ghugus, Chandrapur district of 270 ktpa and at Konsari in Gadchiroli district of 70 ktpa. It has an iron ore mining lease for 50 years till 2057 at Surjagarh village in Gadchiroli district, which is the largest reserve of high-grade iron ore in Maharashtra. The company has been awarded the permit to excavate up to 10 MTPA of iron ore. LMEL has grown significantly in the last few years, with its iron ore mining capacity rising from ~3 MTPA in FY22 to 10 MTPA in FY24.

Investment Rationale

- Scaling up mining and manufacturing capacities: LMEL has mining rights for the Surjagarh Mining Complex (SMC) up to 2057, which secures long-term access to substantial extractable reserves of 157 MT of hematite ore and 706 MT of banded hematite quartz (BHQ) ore. To strengthen its market position and to achieve economies of scale, LMEL will expand its iron ore mining capacity from the existing 10 MTPA to 55 MTPA (including BHQ) by FY29 and increase the capacities of its existing sponge iron (DRI) plants to 0.70 MTPA from 0.34 MTPA. Of the 55 MT targeted capacity, 10 MT is planned as DSO (direct shipped ore) and 45 MT will be BHQ. The BHQ would be beneficiated in the long run to 15 MT of usable ore using a 45 MTPA throughput beneficiation plant. LMEL has set up a 5 TPH pilot BHQ beneficiation plant, and the results are up to mark with low-grade BHQ ore enriching up to 66% Fe along with lower Alumina and Silica content consistently. The higher yields and lower Alumina and Silica differentiate LMEL BHQ from elsewhere in the country.
- Forward integration for increasing share of value-added products: To utilise the iron ore from its mining complex at Hedri (SMC), it plans to move upward in the value chain of steelmaking. It is setting up two slurry pipelines of 85 and 190 km to transport the iron ore slurry to the Konsari and Ghugus plants, respectively. Ultimately, it will set up a 1.2 MT wire rod plant accompanied by a pellet plant of 4 MT at Ghugus and a 3 MTPA steel plant using the BF-BOF route for HRC production at Konsari, along with an 8 MTPA pellet plant.
- Low Royalty on allocated mine offers competitive edge over peers: LMEL was granted the mining rights to the SMC on an allocation basis before the MMDR Amendment Act 2015 by the government through a mining lease in 2007, and it does not have to pay any auction premium to the government. Post the MMDR Amendment Act 2015, mining leases were auctioned and in that process, the winning bidder has to pay 'auction premium' (which averaged at 110.8% over the last 5 years) over the IBM notified price of iron ore fines (62-65% Fe) to the government in addition to Royalty, DMF, and NMET. Acquisition of 79.82% stake in Thriveni Earthmovers and Infra Pvt. Ltd. will lead to cost-efficient MDO operations, resulting in lower mining costs (Consolidation in LMEL to begin from FY26).
- Debt-free Balance sheet: LMEL has an ambitious expansion plan with capex of Rs 32,700 Cr until next 5-6 years when all the expansion projects will be completed. It will spend the Capex in a phased manner largely through internal accruals.

Valuation & Recommendation:

- Considering robust growth prospects and improving operational metrics, we believe LMEL provides a good potential upside from the current levels. We recommend a BUY on the stock with an upside of 10% from the CMP.
