

Weekly Technical Outlook and Picks

- Nifty began the week on a weaker note and remained highly volatile on both sides, reflecting a lack of clear directional strength. The index closed at 25,966 on Friday, registering a weekly loss of 81 points.
- On the weekly chart, Nifty has formed a small bullish candle with shadows on both sides, highlighting indecision among market participants.
- The index found support near the lower band of the rising channel, in place since Mar'25. For bulls to regain control and challenge the all-time high, a sustained close above 26,100 is crucial, while a close below 25,700 could open the door for further downside.
- Technically, a breakout above 26,100 may trigger fresh buying towards 26,350–26,500, whereas a breakdown below 25,800 could lead to selling pressure towards 25,700–25,500.
- For the week ahead, Nifty is expected to trade in a broad range of 26,500–25,500 with a mixed-to-negative bias, as the weekly RSI has turned down from overbought levels and has slipped below its reference line.

- Bank Nifty began the week on a weaker note and remained highly volatile, eventually closing at 59,069, down 321 points for the week.
- On the weekly chart, the index has formed a Doji candlestick, signalling indecision among market participants.
- Index is currently holding above the earlier resistance of 58,600, which has now turned into support, in line with the principle of polarity; a decisive close below this level could open further downside.
- On the upside, a sustained move above 59,300 may invite fresh buying and drive the index towards the 59,500–60,000 zone. On the downside, a break below 59,000 could intensify selling pressure, pulling the index towards 58,500–58,000.
- For the week ahead, Bank Nifty is likely to trade in a broad 60,000–58,000 range with a mixed-to-negative bias as weekly RSI and Stochastic have turned down from overbought levels.
